

Going To Meet The Man

Going to Meet the Man: Navigating the First Encounter and Beyond

Meeting someone new, especially someone you've developed feelings for, can be both exhilarating and terrifying. This feeling is amplified when it's the man – the one you've been anticipating, the one you've built up in your mind, the one who might just change everything. This post isn't about fairy tales; it's a realistic guide to navigating that first meeting and the crucial steps beyond, helping you feel confident and prepared for whatever unfolds. We'll cover everything from pre-date preparation to post-date reflection, offering practical advice and actionable strategies to make the experience positive and memorable.

Preparing for the Big Moment: Setting Yourself Up for Success

Before you even think about outfits, let's tackle the mental preparation. This is crucial because anxiety can sabotage even the best-laid plans.

H2: Managing Pre-Date Jitters:

H3: Acknowledge and Accept: Feeling nervous is completely normal. Acknowledge those butterflies instead of fighting them. Remind yourself that nervousness often manifests as excitement.

H3: Positive Self-Talk: Replace negative thoughts ("What if he doesn't like me?") with positive affirmations ("I'm interesting, I'm fun, and I deserve to be happy").

H3: Mindfulness Techniques: Practice deep breathing or meditation to calm your nerves. Even a few minutes can make a significant difference.

H2: Planning the Perfect First Encounter:

H3: Location, Location, Location: Choose a setting that allows for comfortable conversation. Avoid overly loud or crowded places. A relaxed coffee shop, a scenic park, or a casual restaurant are all good options.

H3: Outfit Choice: Dress comfortably and confidently in an outfit that reflects your personality. The goal is to feel good about yourself, not to impress someone else.

H3: Conversation Starters: Prepare a few conversation starters to avoid awkward silences. Think about shared interests or topics that might spark engaging discussion.

Making the Most of Your First Meeting: Conversation and Connection

The first meeting is all about creating a connection. Remember, this is a two-way street. It's not just about impressing him; it's about seeing if there's a genuine connection.

H2: Active Listening is Key:

H3: Pay Attention: Put away your phone and truly listen to what he has to say. Show genuine interest in his thoughts and feelings.

H3: Ask Thought-Provoking Questions: Avoid simple yes/no questions. Instead, ask open-ended questions that encourage him to share more about himself.

H3: Reflect and Respond: Summarize his points to show you're actively listening and understanding.

H2: Authenticity Trumps Perfection:

H3: Be Yourself: Don't try to be someone you're not. Authenticity is attractive, and trying to be someone else will only lead to exhaustion and potential disappointment.

H3: Embrace Your Quirks: Your unique qualities are what make you special. Don't be afraid to let your personality shine through.

H3: Be Present: Focus on the moment and enjoy getting to know him. Don't dwell on past relationships or future expectations.

After the Date: Reflection and Next Steps

The date is over. Now what? Reflection and honest self-assessment are crucial.

H2: Post-Date Analysis:

H3: Honest Self-Assessment: How did you feel during the date? Were you comfortable? Did you feel a connection?

H3: Identifying Red Flags: Be honest with yourself about any potential red flags that emerged during the meeting.

H3: Consider His Actions: Did he seem genuinely interested in getting to know you? Did he reciprocate your efforts?

H2: Planning for the Future (or Not):

H3: Follow Up (or Not): If you felt a connection, a simple and genuine text or message is appropriate. Don't overthink it.

H3: Respect His Space: If he doesn't initiate contact, respect his decision. Not every meeting leads to a relationship.

H3: Learn from the Experience: Regardless of the outcome, learn from the experience. Every date is a chance to grow and improve your dating skills.

Conclusion:

Meeting "the man" is a significant event, filled with anticipation and uncertainty. By focusing on preparation, active listening, authenticity, and honest self-reflection, you can navigate the experience with confidence and grace. Remember, the goal is to find a genuine connection, not to meet some idealized version of perfection. Embrace the process, be yourself, and enjoy the journey.

FAQs:

1. What if I'm completely speechless during the date? It happens! Take a deep breath, acknowledge the silence, and try to steer the conversation back on track with a question about his interests.

2. How long should I wait before contacting him after the date? There's no magic number. A day or two is usually a good guideline, but trust your instincts.

3. What if the date doesn't go as planned? Not every date will be a match. View it as a learning experience and move on.

4. Is it okay to talk about past relationships on a first date? Generally, it's best to avoid heavy discussions about past relationships on a first date. Focus on getting to know each other in the present.

5. How can I tell if he's genuinely interested? Look for signs of active listening, engaging conversation, and genuine interest in learning about you. He'll likely make an effort to plan a second date if he's interested.

going to meet the man: Going to Meet the Man James Baldwin, 2013-09-17 A major collection of short stories by one of America's most important writers—informed by the knowledge the wounds racism leaves in both its victims and its perpetrators. • “If Van Gogh was our 19th-century artist-saint, James Baldwin is our 20th-century one.” —Michael Ondaatje, Booker Prize-winner of The English Patient In this modern classic, there's no way not to suffer. But you try all kinds of ways to keep from drowning in it. The men and women in these eight short fictions grasp this truth on an elemental level, and their stories detail the ingenious and often desperate ways in which they try to keep their head above water. It may be the heroin that a down-and-out jazz pianist uses to face the terror of pouring his life into an inanimate instrument. It may be the brittle piety of a father who can never forgive his son for his illegitimacy. Or it may be the screen of bigotry that a redneck deputy has raised to blunt the awful childhood memory of the day his parents took him to watch a black man being murdered by a gleeful mob. By turns haunting, heartbreaking, and horrifying, Going to Meet the Man is a major work by one of our most important writers.

going to meet the man: Going To Meet The Man James Baldwin, 2013-11-28 ‘Everyone’s life begins on a level where races, armies, and churches stop. And yet everyone’s life is always shaped by races, churches, and armies’ In these eight extraordinary stories of love, conflict, desperation and fear, James Baldwin shows people trapped by the roles they must play in society, and those who try and escape them. From the child in ‘The Rockpile’ whose God-fearing father will not forgive his illegitimacy, to the adolescent who hides his sexuality from his community in ‘The Outing’, and from the down-and-out jazz pianist recovering from addiction in ‘Sonny’s Blues’ to the chilling initiation of a racist in ‘Going to Meet the Man’, these tales, first published in 1965, explore the subtle and profound wounds that discrimination leaves – both in its victims and its perpetrators. ‘He uses words as the sea uses waves’ Langston Hughes ‘Few, it seems to me, have driven their words with such passion’ Guardian going to meet the man: The Outing James Baldwin, 2014-07-29 In James Baldwin’s classic short story, “The Outing,” from Going to Meet the Man, a Harlem church group escapes the city for a summer day-trip of prayer and, more importantly, romance. Every summer, the Harlem Mount of Olives Pentecostal Assembly gives an outing, around the Fourth of July. There is boating, testifying, and illicit steps towards young love. Delving deeply into the church community he would depict in Go Tell It On The Mountain, this is Baldwin at his most compassionate, investigating the sexual ambivalence and towering religion of a group of young children on their way up the Hudson. “The Outing” is the perfect introduction to an American master. An eBook short.

going to meet the man: Come Out the Wilderness James Baldwin, 2016-05-15 In “Come Out the Wilderness,” an essential and tremendous classic of American literature, Baldwin unmask the heartbreak of one African American woman’s spiritual, sexual, moral, and ultimately futile struggle for control of her future and her happiness in mid-century New York. James Baldwin’s commanding prose remains as pressing in its compassionate portrayal of marginalized figures today as it was during the peak of the Civil Rights Movement. An ebook short.

in real life the way it happens on the big screen. going to meet the man: Before We Were Strangers Renée Carlino, 2015-08-18 From the USA TODAY bestselling author of Sweet Thing and Nowhere But Here comes a love story about a Craigslist "missed connection" post that gives two people a second chance at love fifteen years after they were separated in New York City. To the Green-eyed Lovebird: We met fifteen years ago, almost to the day, when I moved my stuff into the NYU dorm room next to yours at Senior House. You called us fast friends. I like to think it was more. We lived on nothing but the excitement of finding ourselves through music (you were obsessed with Jeff Buckley), photography (I couldn't stop taking pictures of you), hanging out in Washington Square Park, and all the weird things we did to make money. I learned more about myself that year than any other. Yet, somehow, it all fell apart. We lost touch the summer after graduation when I went to South America to work for National Geographic. When I came back, you were gone. A part of me still wonders if I pushed you too hard after the wedding... I didn't see you again until a month ago. It was a Wednesday. You were rocking back on your heels, balancing on that thick yellow line that runs along the subway platform, waiting for the F train. I didn't know it was you until it was too late, and then you were gone. Again. You said my name; I saw it on your lips. I tried to will the train to stop, just so I could say hello. After seeing you, all of the youthful feelings and memories came flooding back to me, and now I've spent the better part of a month wondering what your life is like. I might be totally out of my mind, but would you like to get a drink with me and catch up on the last decade and a half? M going to meet the man: Disagreeable Tales Léon Bloy, 2015 Thirty tales of theft, onanism, incest, murder and a host of other forms of perversion and cruelty from the ungrateful beggar and pilgrim of the absolute, Léon Bloy. Disagreeable Tales, first published in French in 1894, collects Bloy's narrative sermons from the depths: a cauldron of frightful anecdotes and inspired misanthropy that represents a high point of the French Decadent movement and the most emblematic entry into the library of the Cruel Tale christened by Villiers de l'Isle-Adam. Whether depicting parents and offspring being sacrificed for selfish gains, or imbeciles sacrificing their own individuality on a literary whim, these tales all draw sustenance from an underlying belief: the root of religion is crime against man, nature and God, and that in this hell on earth, even the worst among us has a soul. A close friend to Joris-Karl Huysmans, and later admired by the likes of Kafka and Borges, Léon Bloy (1846-1917) is among the best known but least translated of the French Decadent writers. Nourishing antireligious sentiments in his youth, his outlook changed radically when he moved to Paris and came under the influence of Barbey d'Aurevilly, the unconventionally religious novelist best known for Les Diaboliques. He earned the dual nicknames of The Pilgrim of the Absolute through his unorthodox devotion to the Catholic Church, and The Ungrateful Beggar through his endless reliance on the charity of friends to support him and his family.

going to meet the man: Amazing Story of the Man Who Cycled from India to Europe for Love Per J Andersson, 2017-02-02 WINNER OF THE MARCO POLO OUTSTANDING GENERAL TRAVEL THEMED BOOK OF THE YEAR AT THE 2018 EDWARD STANFORD TRAVEL WRITING AWARDS The story begins in a public square in New Delhi. On a cold December evening a young European woman of noble descent appears before an Indian street artist known locally as PK and asks him to paint her portrait - it is an encounter that will change their lives irrevocably. PK was not born in the city. He grew up in a small remote village on the edge of the jungle in East India, and his childhood as an untouchable was one of crushing hardship. He was forced to sit outside the classroom during school, would watch classmates wash themselves if they came into contact with him, and had stones thrown at him when he approached the village temple. According to the priests, PK dirtied everything that was pure and holy. But had PK not been an untouchable, his life would have turned out very differently. This is the remarkable true story of how love and courage led PK to overcome extreme poverty, caste prejudice and adversity – as well as a 7,000-mile, adventure-filled journey across continents and cultures – to be with the woman he loved.

going to meet the man: Men Explain Things to Me Rebecca Solnit, 2014-04-14 The National Book Critics Circle Award-winning author delivers a collection of essays that serve as the perfect “antidote to mansplaining” (The Stranger). In her comic, scathing essay “Men Explain Things to Me,” Rebecca Solnit took on what often goes wrong in conversations between men and women. She wrote about men who wrongly assume they know things and wrongly assume women don’t, about why this arises, and how this aspect of the gender wars works, airing some of her own hilariously awful encounters. She ends on a serious note— because the ultimate problem is the silencing of women who have something to say, including those saying things like, “He’s trying to kill me!” This book features that now-classic essay with six perfect complements, including an examination of the great feminist writer Virginia Woolf’s embrace of mystery, of not knowing, of doubt and ambiguity, a highly original inquiry into marriage equality, and a terrifying survey of the scope of contemporary violence against women. “In this series of personal but unsentimental essays, Solnit gives succinct shorthand to a familiar female experience that before had gone unarticulated, perhaps even unrecognized.” —The New York Times “Essential feminist reading.” —The New Republic “This slim book hums with power and wit.” —Boston Globe “Solnit tackles big themes of gender and power in these accessible essays. Honest and full of wit, this is an integral read that furthers the conversation on feminism and contemporary society.” —San Francisco Chronicle “Essential.” —Marketplace “Feminist, frequently funny, unflinchingly honest and often scathing in its conclusions.” —Salon going to meet the man: How to Fall in Love with Anyone Mandy Len Catron, 2017-06-27 “A beautifully written and well-researched cultural criticism as well as an honest memoir” (Los Angeles Review of Books) from the author of the popular New York Times essay, “To Fall in Love with Anyone, Do This,” explores the romantic myths we create and explains how they limit our ability to achieve and sustain intimacy. What really makes love last? Does love ever work the way we say it does in movies and books and Facebook posts? Or does obsessing over those love stories hurt our real-life relationships? When her parents divorced after a twenty-eight year marriage and her own ten-year relationship ended, those were the questions that Mandy Len Catron wanted to answer. In a series of candid, vulnerable, and wise essays that takes a closer look at what it means to love someone, be loved, and how we present our love to the world, “Catron melds science and emotion beautifully into a thoughtful and thought-provoking meditation” (Bookpage). She delves back to 1944, when her grandparents met in a coal mining town in Appalachia, to her own dating life as a professor in Vancouver. She uses biologists’ research into dopamine triggers to ask whether the need to love is an innate human drive. She uses literary theory to show why we prefer certain kinds of love stories. She urges us to question the unwritten scripts we follow in relationships and looks into where those scripts come from. And she tells the story of how she decided to test an experiment that she’d read about—where the goal was to create intimacy between strangers using a list of thirty-six questions—and ended up in the surreal situation of having millions of people following her brand-new relationship. “Perfect fodder for the romantic and the cynic in all of us” (Booklist), How to Fall in Love with Anyone flips the script on love. “Clear-eyed and full of heart, it is mandatory reading for anyone coping with—or curious about—the challenges of contemporary courtship” (The Toronto Star).

going to meet the man: House of Nutter Lance Richardson, 2018-05-10 A wildly entertaining biography of the British fashion designer who set the trends for rock royalty from the Beatles to Mick Jagger to Elton John. Tommy Nutter was a visionary tailor in the bespoke tradition who dressed everybody from Lord Montagu of Beaulieu to Twiggy, who outfitted three of the Beatles for the cover of Abbey Road (George Harrison preferred jeans), who put Mick Jagger in a white suit for his wedding to Bianca and who dressed Elton John for years, using the singer as his muse for his signature outrageous style. Nutter was alluring for his ambiguity -- a chameleon who could rub shoulders with Princess Margaret and then dance with the drag queens at Last Resort -- and his clothes were the physical expression of a sharp, audacious wit. House of Nutter charts Tommy Nutter's dramatic career that spanned barely 23 years, ending in 1992 with his untimely death. It is a history of London during an era of economic and cultural upheaval, a celebration of the methods and traditions of Savile Row; and an elegy for what was lost during the worst days of the HIV/AIDS epidemic. With archival access to photos, letters and interviews from Tommy Nutter's sole living relative, his brother, David, Lance Richardson takes us behind the '70s glamour to explore the public face and private life of one of Britain's most respected yet rule-breaking bespoke clothiers and the celebrities he dressed.
